Martial Law to End Food Offer In Berlin at Midnight Gives Reds

East Sector Still Replaces Beria Seethes With Discontent Today

Berlin, July 11 (A)-Soviet Maj. Gen. P. T. Dibrova announced today that martial law imposed on rebellious East Berlin June 17 will be lifted at midnight.

Discontent Rife East Berlin still seethed with discontent today. Many workers continued to be held in overcrowded Soviet and state security police jails, awaiting trial and stiff sentences as rioters.

But the Russian general, who broke the June 17 revolt here with 25,000 armored troops, apparently was convinced that thousands of East German soldiers could now maintain the direct Soviet intervention.

There was no concrete evidence that the crisis in Moscow over police boss Lavrenti Beria's downfall had speeded up issuance of Dibrova's order. But allied sources said the Russians seemed generally anxious to get their divisions extricated as fast as possible from police duty in East

Changes Explained For Veterans Who Seek Home Loans

Veterans applying for GI loans today are confronted with different conditions and requirements many inquiries, F. William Sheehan, officer in charge, Veterans as follows:

The maximum allowable interest rate on GI loans guaranteed by VA has been raised to 4½ per cent from 4 per cent effective May 5, 1953.

Credit restrictions on GI home loans have been removed making it permissible for veterans to obtain such loans with no down payment and with a repayment term up to 30 years at the discretion of the lenders.

In addition, veterans who now plan to seek GI loans from private lenders for homes, farms or businesses should apply to VA regional offices in advance for certificates of eligibility.

WORLD FOOD PRODUCTION

With all the practice man has had in rustling up victuals, he still doesn't seem to be very good at it.

A United Nations report for 1951-52 shows world food production is barely keeping up with the population increase. Worse yet, is the faulty distribution of food.

The United States is one of the relatively few countries which is doing all right. In fact we're doing almost too well. One of our medical problems is that we're too fat.

For the two-year period covered by the report the daily average calorie consumption per person in this country increased from 3,170 to 3,210.

But even here we're plagued at the moment with too much food in some places and too little in others. Wheat, for instance.

States east of the Mississippi are going to have a bumper crop this year. But they have only limited storage space. The biggest wheat-growing states farther west, however, are going to have a below-average crop. Yet this is where the biggest storage facilities are.

With all this, we're still going to have more than enough wheat for our needs, what with more than a half-billion-bushel surplus from last year.

The big food shortages are in other parts of the world, notably India, where the fear of famine is constant. India's daily calorie consumption per average individual is only a little more than half what ours is. Yet even that has dropped nearly 400 calories a day below the pre-World War II average.

The caloric intake in South America is remaining about stationary. And even in food-rich Denmark, the intake is still below the prewar average. The same goes for Germany, Ireland, Austria, Greece and Italy.

There are several reasons for this situation. One of them is that so much productive effort and equipment is devoted to turning out things other than food. Also, international trade barriers keep food out of some countries where it is needed. And dollar shortages are a serious handicap.

Fortunately for everybody, right in the middle of these bleak statistics comes along a man named Jacob Rosin with a book called, "The Road to Abundance."

Rosin says the only reason everybody in the world isn't well fed is that we've got an "infatuation with nature" and try to raise our edibles the hard way.

Agriculture, as we now practice it, is the most inefficient of industries, he says, needing a fantastic amount of space to produce a relatively small return. And all at a cost much higher than it need be.

Synthetic foods produced by chemistry are Rosin's answer and he says they would taste just as good and contain as much food value as the real thing. Furthermore, there would be no limit on the amounts that could be produced synthetically. In other words there should be enough for everybody.

Which sounds fine, if people can be persuaded to eat beefsteak manufactured on a Detroit assembly line instead of on a Texas ranch. And if the Texas ranchers and Iowa corn growers can be talked into giving up their outdoor independence and beginning to punch a time clock in a food factory.

That last part, particularly, might take a little doing.

Vacation trips certainly straighten out one thing. After a carefree week or so on the highway or at the favorite resort there are no more budget worries—usually there isn't even a budget left.

New York City has established a helicopter police patrol. The copters will fly regular beats keeping an eye on waterways and waterfronts. Justice will literally descend on wrong-doers from on high.

A slow moving man behind the wheel of a fast moving automobile can produce rapidly developing tragedy.

A burglar who was photographed at his work by police was incensed at the idea. Is a man to have no privacy at all?

'These Days' By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

INTENT

The main purpose of an intelligence organization of any country is to gather, evaluate and utilize information on the intent of friend and foe alike. Intent is a matter of evaluation and may involve a certain amount of estimating, assuming, and even crystal gazing. A competent intelligence organization does not rule out any possibility; it tries not to be caught short and then have to alibi its failure to forecast the conduct of other nations. It exists to do forecasting and its officials are paid to do precisely that.

The public and even the press know very little about the intelligence activities of our country. They are necessarily secretive and should remain so. It used to be that the Army, Navy and State Departments functioned independently, gathering their own data and making their own estimates. When this system was in vogue, each department sent copies of data to the others; but each made its own evaluations.

In World War 2, the OSS came into existence as a super-espionage organization to specialize in difficult operations. It was over-advertised and glamorized which is never necessary for espionage. That spy is best who is least known or noticed. A hidden organization can become overt through a minor indescretion, thus imperilling the lives of agents. For instance, the single defection of Guzenko in Canada led to the exposure of the whole of Soviet Russia's espionage apparatus in the Western world.

Finally, the Central Intelligence Agency was organized to meet all the needs of the country for intelligence and espionage. The CIA is a large, independent arm of government with a huge budget If its judgments and evaluations are correct, it can be of the greatest value and whatever is spent on it is justified. If its estimates are wrong and the agencies of government, from the President down, operate on incorrectly evaluated data, then the danger to the country can be enor-

Therefore the CIA, which gathers, eliminates and evaluates both strategic and tactical data, is a tremendously important agency of government. At present, the CIA is managed by Allen Dulles, brother of the Secretary of State. His predecessor was General Walter Bedell Smith, now Under Secretary of State and one of the closet advisers to General Eisenhower.

It is quite clear from all available data that the intent of the Germans to attack in what came to be known as the Battle of the Bulge could have and should have been known. American intelligence was inadequate, particularly as to the intent of the Germans. There are many explanations of why we failed to know the German intent, but none of them is even plausible.

To cite two more instances: it should have been known in the early stages of the Korean War, that Chinese troops were marching from Canton to Manchuria to come to the relief of the North Koreans who had been defeated by General Mac-Arthur. A controversy developed as to whether General Charles A. Willoughby, MacArthur's intelligence officer, or the CIA was badly informed. Willoughby blames the CIA and the CIA blames Willoughby. The fact is that an intention of the Chinese Communists, many months in the me and actually in process, was not known to our command until the Chinese struck at us.

Similarly, President Syngman Rhee publicly stated his intention to adopt an independent attitude toward anti-Communist prisoners of war unless the Republic of Korea got a square deal out of the so-called truce. This statement of intent on the part of the Republic of Korea, was evaluated incorrectly as a bluff. It turned out to be start-

Evaluation is difficult, requiring not only enormous fundamental knowledge but keen judgment. It would be stupid to assume that evaluation will always be correct and that any human being possesses godlike wisdom.

Nevertheless, when the stakes are so high, too many errors of judgment cannot be lightly accepted as average human error. That can be too costly. An intelligence organization must be sensitive to the intent of every other country. It should have, for instance, anticipated the development of reutralism. However, no inteligence organization can or should be responsible for overt acts to correct discovered intentions. Espionage discovers; other agencies act on the discoveries. Otherwise, the intelligence organization becomes another State Department and defies the reason for its existence.

SKIN TESTS FOR ALLERGY

Some individuals become sarcastic as they recount the questions asked by the physician in trying to obtain a complete history of not only their own symptoms but also a history of the health of their parents, brothers and sisters, uncles, aunts, grandparents. Yet all these questions may have an important bearing on the symptoms of the patient.

One vital question that physicians ask is whether or not the patient has been taking any drug a day or several hours before coming for his examination. I have written before of a heart patient consulting a physician while taking regular doses of digitalis for a heart condition. The physician failing to ask the question about taking any drugs allowed a certain amount of exercise to be taken because the heart condition was guarded or controlled by the digitalis. For this reason, when a patient is consulting a physician for allergic symptoms as present in asthma, hay fever, eczema, head colds, hives and other ailments, he should inform the physician if he is taking drugs to counteract these symptoms or the physician, in making skin tests to find the offender or offenders, may prescribe drugs causing allergic symptoms.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Drs. John M. Sheldon, Kenneth P. Mathews and Robert G. Lovell, Ann Arbor, Mich., state that after the patient gives a history of his symptoms and before the skin tests are conducted, the physician must be sure that his patient has not taken anti-histamines (anti-allergic drugs)—aminophylline, epinephrine, ephedrine—within the previous 12 hours. Antihistamine drugs may attenuate (thin down) the wheel (hive) type of skin reaction for several hours after they have been taken. In fact, other than anti-histamine drugs should not be taken within 12 hours of the skin tests as they may have a tendency to affect the test and make a positive appear negative. Where many skin tests are to be made, these physicians can use the back of the patient for skin tests-scratch, prick the needle into upper layers of skin. When only a few tests are to be made, the forearm or upper arm is used. The substances causing allergy symptoms are usually (1) sub-stances that can be inhaled from the air and, (b) wheat, potato, navy beans, chocolate, nut meats, sea foods, cottonseed, flaxseed.

The commonest allergic substances floating in the air are cat dander, cattle dander, dog dander, hog dander, feather dust, mattress dust, furniture dust, pollen and molds.

Drs. Sheldon, Mahews and Lowell report that the skin tests for inhalents—dust, pollen, etc.,—are highly reliable; the skin tests for food are not so reliable.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JULY 11, 1953 WORLD FOOD PRODUCTION

With all the practice man has had in rustling up victuals, he still doesn't seem to be very good at it.

A United Nations report for 1951-52 shows world food production is barely keeping up with the population increase. Worse yet, is the faulty distribution of food.

The big food shortages are in other parts of the world, notably India, where the fear of famine is constant. India's daily calorie consumption per average individual is only a little more than half what ours is. Yet even that has dropped nearly 400 calories a day below the pre-World War II average.

The caloric intake in South America is remaining about stationary. And even in food-rich Denmark, the intake is still below the prewar average. The same goes for Germany, Ireland, Austria, Greece and Italy.

There are several reasons for this situation. One of them is that so much productive effort and equipment is devoted to turning out things other than food. Also, international trade barriers keep food out of some countries where it is needed. And dollar shortages are a serious handicap.

Fortunately for everybody, right in the middle of these bleak statistics comes along a man named Jacob Rosin with a book called, "The Road to Abundance."

It is quite clear from all available data that the intent of the Germans to attack in what came to be known as the Battle of the Bulge could have and should have been known. American intelligence was inadequate, particularly as to the intent of the Germans. There are many explanations of why we failed to know the German intent, but none of them is even plausible. To cite two more instances: it should have been known in the early stages of the Korean War, investigating committees for con- overseas building program. The fact is that an intention of the Chinese Communists, many months in the making and actually in process, was not known to our command until the Chinese struck at us.

Similarly, President Syngman Rhee publicly stated his intention to adopt an independent attitude toward anti-Communist prisoners of war unless the Republic of Korea got a square deal out of the so-called truce. This statement of intent on the part of the Republic of Korea, was evaluated ncorrectly as a bluff. It turned out to be start-

However, no inteligence organization can or should be responsible for overt acts to correct discovered intentions. Espionage discovers; other agencies act on the discoveries. Otherwise, the intelligence organization becomes another State Department and defies the reason for its existence. (Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SKIN TESTS FOR ALLERGY

Some individuals become sarcastic as they recount the questions asked by the physician in trying to obtain a complete history of not only their own symptoms but also a history of the health of their parents, brothers and sisters, uncles, aunts, grandparents. Yet all these questions may have an 000 were still unpaid. He asked important bearing on the symptoms of the patient. that the city treasurer be au- be held at the home of Mrs. Primo

One vital question that physicians ask is Agriculture, as we now practice it, is the whether or not the patient has been taking any drug a day or several hours before coming for his examination. I have written before of a heart patient consulting a physician while taking regular doses of digitalis for a heart condition. The physician failing to ask the question about taking any drugs allowed a certain amount of exercise to be taken because the heart condition was guarded or controlled by the digitalis. For this reason, when patient is consulting a physician for allergic ymptoms as present in asthma, hay fever, eczema, ead colds, hives and other ailments, he should inform the physician if he is taking drugs to counteract these symptoms or the physician, in making skin tests to find the offender or offenders, may prescribe drugs causing allergic symptoms.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Drs. John M. Sheldon, Kenneth P. Mathews and Robert G. Lovell, Ann Arbor, Mich., state that after the patient gives a history of his symptoms and before the skin tests are conducted, the physician must be sure that his patient has not taken anti-histamines (anti-allergic drugs) -- aminophylepinephrine, ephedrine-within the previous 12 hours. Antihistamine drugs may attenuate (thin down) the wheel (hive) type of skin reaction for several hours after they have been taken. In fact, other than anti-histamine drugs should not be taken within 12 hours of the skin tests as they may have a tendency to affect the test and make a positive appear negative.

Where many skin tests are to be made, these physicians can use the back of the patient for skin tests-scratch, prick the needle into upper layers of skin. When only a few tests are to be made, the forearm or upper arm is used. The substances causing allergy symptoms are usually (1) substances that can be inhaled from the air and, (b)

The commonest allergic substances floating in the air are cat dander, cattle dander, dog dander, hog dander, feather dust, mattress dust, furniture dust, pollen and molds

The commonest food allergens are: milk, eggs, wheat, potato, navy beans, chocolate, nut meats, sea foods, cottonseed, flaxseed. Drs. Sheldon, Mahews and Lowell report that the skin tests for inhalents-dust, pollen, etc.,are highly reliable; the skin tests for food are not so reliable.

Fire Insurance on Homes Inadequate Survey Discloses

A 14-state survey made by the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents has disclosed that 70 per cent of property owners who have suffered fire loss did not have adequate insurance coverage, it was reported today by Lawrence A. Quilty of Kings-ton, a member of the association.

"Too many new home owners, in trying to save a few pennies by not insuring the contents of their home or apartment against loss through fire, are losing dol-lars as a result of their short-sightedness," Quilty said.

This failure to insure house-hold contents, Quilty said, was revealed in tabulating the results of a questionnaire submitted to fire insurance adjusters by the National Association.

Inadequate insurance coverage in one state was evident in 98 per cent of all property involved in serious fires. In another state, 82 per cent of owners were insufficiently covered, the survey

Fire Insurance on Homes Inadequate Survey Discloses

A 14-state survey made by the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents has disclosed that 70 per cent of property owners who have suffered fire loss did not have adequate insurance coverage, it was reported today by Lawrence A. Quilty of Kingston, a member of the association. 'Too many new home owners, in trying to save a few pennies by not insuring the contents of their home or apartment against loss through fire, are losing dollars as a result of their shortsightedness," Quilty said.

This failure to insure household contents, Quilty said, was revealed in tabulating the results of a questionnaire submitted to fire insurance adjusters by the National Association.
